THE A. & M. COLLEGE AND THE LEGISLATURE.

As a general proposition The Eagle is opposed to extraordinary sessions of the legislature. We do not believe they are justifiable except extraordinary conditions or situations arise—conditions that can not be solved otherwise, and which militate against the general welfare if postponed until a regular biennial session of the legislative body.

In our opinion such a condition has now arisen, and one that is as urgent as has ever confronted the sturdy yeomanry of Texas since the state was enrolled under the stars and stripes as an integral number of this great Union. We refer to the burning of the main or executive building of the state Agricultural and Mechanical College on Monday morning, May 27. This is a blow that has fallen heavily, not only on the college per se, but upon the whole state of Texas. It is a blow to the state's educational interests, the most vital of all the living, throbbing interests that engage the serious thought and consideration of both citizen and statesman. When you touch the educational interests of a state you touch the very center and source of all life. Education is to man what the sun is to the earth. It gives all heat, all light, all power. It sends the warm life-blood tingling through the arteries of the nation and makes it great or small according to the understanding, the training, the culture, the preparation of its citizenship. These statements we feel sure none will deny.

The calamities that have befallen the A. & M. College within the year—the burning of the mess hall some months ago, and now the total destruction of the splendid main building—bring the officers and directors of the institution face to face with a condition that demands to be solved with wisdom, and with all possible haste. Solved quickly, that the usefulness of this great institution may not be hindered or in any way impaired.

The situation is so urgent that we believe it will appeal to Governor Colquitt in such a way that he will see fit in his wisdom to call the legislature together in extraordinary session that it may provide the means whereby the work of reparation may begin at once. It is said that "he gives twice who gives quickly," and in this instance the state would certainly perform a double duty by grappling the situation with a quick, strong hand.

We do not believe this action on the part of Governor Colquitt would be a violation of his campaign pledge to give Texas "legislative peace." This pledge, we believe, was made in wisdom, and we know it has been kept with fidelity. Now, however, such a crisis has arisen that we feel assured, should the governor call an extra session, his action would be applauded by the press and people of the entire state.

The A. & M. College is among the most, if it is not in fact the very most important institution in the state's splendid educational system. Its work is so important in the education and training of the young men of Texas that it would be a calamity should the scope of its usefulness be in any way limited or curtailed. It affords the young men of this state that form of education that is absolutely necessary in their equipment for the real duties and battles of life. It gives them a model, modern education, a practical, every-day training that the world now absolutely demands. It has now come to the place, when we leave the professions, that no young man going out into the world can cope with his fellows unless he has received the practical, scientific training offered by the A. & M. College. The world wants practically trained young men, the demand is greater than the supply, and there is never a time when the great industries of the country are not calling for the graduates of the A. & M. College.

With this great institution properly equipped, it offers to the young men of the state the finest training to be obtained on the face of the earth, and makes it unnecessary for them to go beyond our own borders to be educated and trained in every art and science. Twelve hundred of the stalwart young men of Texas are at the A. & M. College this year, and this number will be increased by several hundred at the beginning of the next session. So it will be from year to year, and there is no longer the least shadow of doubt that within just a few years from three to five thousand young Texans will be knocking for admittance at the doors of this great educational institution. To neglect it would be folly. Failure to keep it at the very highest point of efficiency would be a criminal injustice to the boys of Texas who are to be the leaders of the future.

It is now sorely crippled. Its black-

A Bolt from the Blue!

Struck by serges!

A veritable downpour of popularity of this famous fabric is sweeping the country, as it does every year, for there is nothing that has so consistently withstood the storms of Fabric Innovations as the Serge of Blue—necessary to complete the wardrobe of every man.

A blue serge is a blue serge the wide world over—it is handled by every tailor, good bad and indifferent—and finished accordingly; but tailored by Hart Schaffner & Marx its individuality places it far in advance of contemporary productions.

It is no longer a blue serge suit—it is a suit of blue serge.

As the lightning without thunder, the heavens without stars, the ocean without the "serging" tide—like unto these is a man's wardrobe without a suit of blue serge.

Whether in plain or in "herring bones"—hair lines or checks—you'll find a display in keeping with our standard of excellence—and moderate prices.

ened walls and ruins cry out to the state of Texas, its foster parent, for help. The need is urgent. The situation is critical. The exigencies of the case demand the immediate assembling of the legislature, so that that body of representative men of the state, guided by the wisdom of our governor, may make provision for the reparation of all damages, and at the same time provide for the needs of the future.

The college is a part, and a vital part of the state itself. Whatever is done for the college, is done for the whole state. The eyes of the people are upon the governor and the legislature, and they stand ready to applaud whatever effort is made in behalf of the college; and the prompter and nobler the effort, the louder will be the applause. Having made ample provision for every need, so that the work of this great school will move on without let of hindrance, they will stand approved before the people of Texas as "workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

The Bryan Eagle is making a great holler about the dust nuisance along the main business thoroughfare of that city. We used to have the same trouble, and in a most aggravated form, until Ed Sapp got on the "water wagon." No more dust now.—Navasota Examiner.

The work of installing the H. & T. C. automatic bell system, which will give warning of approaching trains at all crossings, is nearing completion. This is a great safety appliance and the road is to be commended upon its installation.

It has rained and the weeds will grow faster than ever. The tribe of the stegomia fasciata will increase with lightning-like rapidity. There's got to be some more swatting done. Get busy.

The rain of last night was worth millions to Texas. It came just in the nick o' time, and yet there are those who doubt the guidance and direction of the great Jehovah.

Kansas has been basely slandered by one of its own newspapers which says: "A shabby pair of trousers often covers a warm and honest heart."

A Navasota merchant announces ladies' skirts one-fourth off. If they should get another fourth off them here, there would not be much left.

The Lord took a hand in the street sprinkling proposition and it was well done. Let us give thanks.

REVERIE

On Reading "The Old Wash Place." There are pictures drawn by artists with the brush and with the pen. That have thrilled the very nations and have stirred the hearts of men.

But I think the sweetest picture I've ever seen or heard

Are the ones drawn by the heart-strings, that are painted word by word;

Such a picture lies before me, painted by a loyal son,

I can see it, oh, so plainly, for so well it has been done.

I can see the little mother with the face so young and fair,
With the smile so full of sunshine,
dogwood blossoms in her hair,
As she flits about the wash place softly singing in her joy
Lullabies that charm her hearers babe and sister-girl and boy.
I can hear a redbird's whistle, even on the very day
When that last farewell waved fondly from the ranks of men in gray.

I can see those little nestlings, that dear little brood of three
In the steam of the old wash place watching mother earnestly
While she toils with "tubs and kettle and the soap gourd and the stick,"
In the meantime singing bravely while her heart grew faint and sick.

But those little bright-eyed darlings must not feel the sting of war;
So she strove to carol gaily just as she had done of yore.

I can feel the solemn stillness that throughout the morning lay
When there came the cruel message dashing all her hopes away.

When the birds forgot to warble forth their wonted melodies,
And the flowers shed the teardrops that had fallen from the skies;

I can see her in the wash place kneeling there among the three,

W. T. JAMES

For their sakes so bravely facing this, her soul's Gethsemane.

Oh, ye world of restless mothers, what can give you sweeter bliss
Than to leave your sons and daughters memories that equal this?
To what greater heights aspire you little mothers young and fair,
Than those reached while you are kneeling with your little ones in prayer?
Than to be as this dear mother, worthy of a diadem?
Ah, the one who scorned her efforts may not touch her garment's hem

This old world is but a wash place where we labor day by day,

Where the Prince of Earth and Heaven came to wash our sins away,
And the sweetness of His patience and the youngness of His years
Make our hearts to ache with pity and our eyes to fill with tears.
Oh, the joy that He is risen and beyond the jasper sea,
Mid the Father's many mansions doth prepare for such as she,
There, when earthly tasks are ended, through His mercy and His grace
One by one His saints shall gather from this steamy old wash place.
—Mrs. Lottie V. Allen in Houston Post.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

All the stranded actor wants is a show.

Gossip never interests a woman—if she has heard of it before.

The chap with an open-faced smile is always sure of a welcome.

A girl wouldn't mind having red hair if it were not for the color.

Swallowing one's pride must be rather hard on the digestive apparatus.

A woman is proud of her husband's insomnia—if she thinks it brands him as a brain worker.

His satanic majesty hasn't much use for a man who spends his time in trying to earn an honest living for his family.

If a man is a millionaire it is an easy matter to bring up his son so that he won't be able to support himself later.
